She prepared a story on sharing and caring with the help of teachers. She was confident and performed well.

Caring and Sharing (friends)

My grandmother used to say, “The best way to multiply your happiness is to share with others whatever you have food, clothes, toys, books etc.”

Whenever I denied sharing my toys and chocolates with my brother, she used to say. “Sharing brings not only joy but it teaches us the importance of taking care of others. Sharing is truly a win win.” But at that time I was not able to understand, how sharing can bring joy. So I continued my petty fight with my younger brother until and unless I myself experienced that joy.

Hello everyone I am Amishi Jain. I am the student of class I. Today I am going to share an unforgettable incident of my life. One day after the class when the bell rang for the lunch time. We all got excited because it was a special day, it was a sharing day. We all were thinking about eating variety of snacks. We all picked up our lunch boxes and started opening it. All boxes had yummy food except one. Sameer.....

Sameer opened his lunch box and that had only some biscuits in it because his mother was not keeping well. Sameer was sad and took the permission to go out to avoid the situation. The teacher noticed his discomfort and when he went out she motivated the students to share their lunch with him.

When Sameer came back and saw.... he felt something was there inside his lunch box. He checked and was surprised who filled his box with food- yummy sandwich, veg cutlet, apple etc. He saw everybody and we all were smiling.

He smiled too. When I saw a twinkling eye and a big smile on my friend’s face, everything (which my grandmother used to say) fleshed into my mind.

I that happiness can only be felt in your heart.

Finally, I want to say,

“If you really want to show someone,

Just how much you care.

The easiest thing to do,

is to learn how to share.”

Thank You. And have a nice day.
